About us...

The Medical Student Journal of Australia (MSJA) is dedicated to bringing students of medicine, nursing, allied health, pharmacy and dentistry the best peer-reviewed research and information in a clinically useful and engaging way.

The journal accepts manuscripts from medical and other health students and recent graduates from Australia and the Asia-Pacific region.

The MSJA is available online to all 30,000 Australian health students and to all international students through both the journal website at msja.anu.edu.au and the ANU e-view publications website eview.anu.edu.au. A limited number of paper copies is also produced.

MSJA ascribes to a rigorous editing and peer-review process to appraise manuscripts for quality, clarity, and originality. The editors are passionate about providing a medium through which students and junior professionals of different disciplines may publish their research, communicate their views on topical issues and gain further insights into clinical and career education.

MSJA is run by students from The Australian National University Medical School (ANUMS). The MSJA was the first journal of its kind in Australia, and it endeavours to connect the health workforce of Australia's future.
